

I WISH

By Me 193

I wish I had the real comforts of home back in my life—with my mother and father, my grandparents, my aunts and uncles... the love of my family members and friends who have passed on, surrounded by all my dogs who are gone.

I wish for a time when the cares of this world were not so crushing.

I wish for a time gone by, when people actually cared for one another, when neighbors knew each other.

I wish for a time when storytelling by family members was more treasured than texting friends on social media or staring at our cell phones.

I wish for a time when going for a ride to the hardware store with Dad was the best thing all day.

I wish for a time when my dogs were alive and at play.

I wish for a time when frog hunting or playing army down by the brook was thrilling.

I wish for a time when I was truly loved and not feel so alone most of the time consumed with problems.

I wish for 193
